

American Advertising Federation 4th District Unveils its 2008 Public Service Campaign

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (March 12, 2008) – The American Advertising Federation (AAF) 4th District unveiled its 2008 public service campaign during a press conference today at the state Capitol.

A two-month state-wide teaser blitz, featuring “think_ _ _logically,” ended today with the unveiling of the remainder of the campaign’s slogan. Now complete, the slogan – thinkECOLOGically ... Reduce, Reuse, Recycle – embodies the AAF 4th District drive to raise awareness of the importance of protecting Florida’s environment.

The comprehensive campaign features television spots; radio, print, web and billboard public service announcements (PSA); music; and a butterfly with leaf wings that support the objective. Utilizing these components, the AAF 4th District will educate Floridians on simple steps and changes they can make in their daily routine that can have a big impact on protecting the environment.

ECO the Butterfly, a personification of this campaign, made its debut today at the Capitol. ECO will spread the campaign’s message to children throughout Florida by making personal appearances and appearing on educational materials.

Components of the public service campaign were divided among a group of agencies throughout Florida who specialize in varying aspects of marketing communication. Music as Message and idgroup created the billboard, radio, print and website components of the public service campaign. Beloved Experiential handled events marketing, CMR Studios created the animated television PSA, and TenUnited’s Orlando office led the public relations efforts.

Those in attendance at the press conference included members of the AAF 4th District, legislators, and key government officials.
